Same project. Third version. Finally makes sense.

V1: one massive prompt, $1/run.

V2: subworkflows & split prompts.

Now, V3 handles verification before fetching. The model only sees what it needs.

The Evolution of an Automation

I spent weeks following tutorials. Built every template. Understood nothing—because their data flows weren't breaking. Mine weren't either, because they weren't mine.

The frustration is the curriculum.

V3 Architecture Canvas

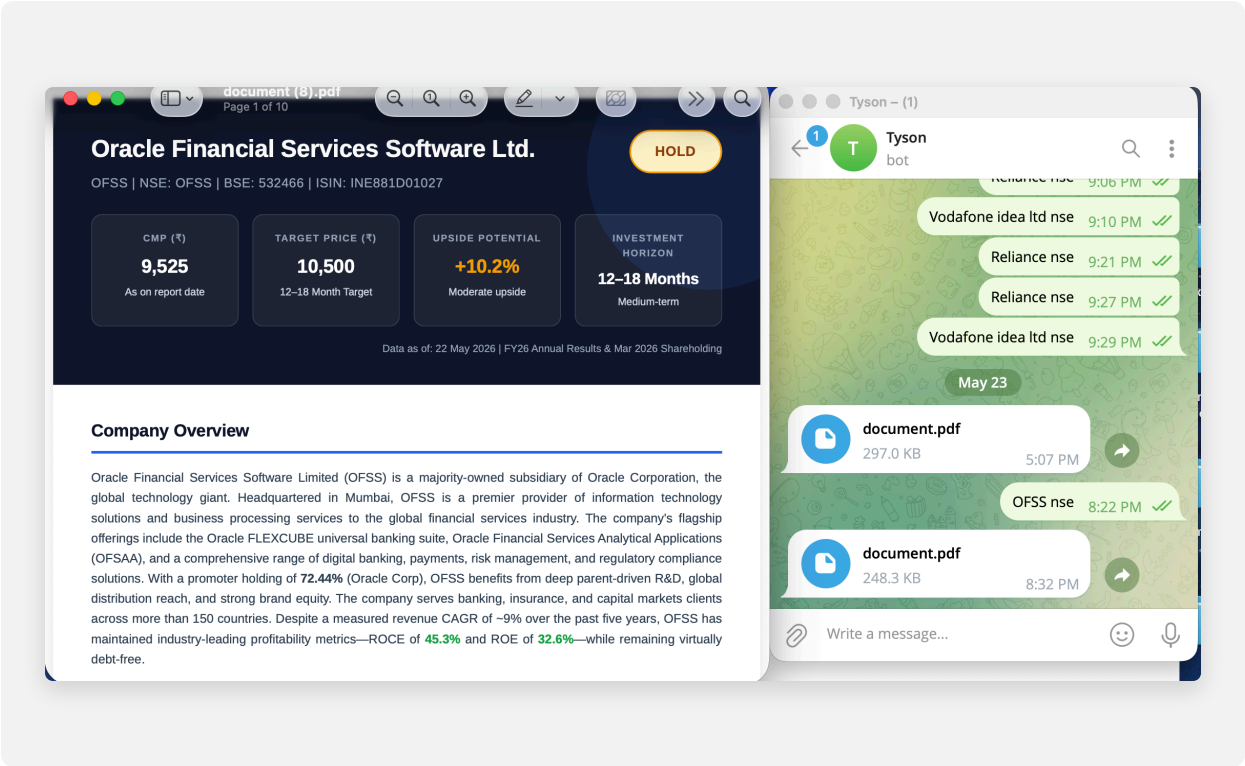

Data mapping errors, variable names pointing nowhere, infinite loops. That is the actual class. Here is the resulting n8n production flow.

Seamless Chat Delivery

The workflow is controlled via a simple Telegram trigger, allowing on-demand stock queries, parameter overrides, and immediate PDF delivery.

The Output PDF Report

When the analysis completes, a multi-page PDF report is generated containing deep financial stats and news context, and returned to the user.

The Payoff: $0.06 Per Report

Nobody ships a good automation on the first try. Most tutorials show the finished thing. They skip the three versions before it.

V4 is coming.

What version are you on?
